A THIEF WITHOUT SENTIMENT.

Stole Propelling Chair of S. L. Lewis, Crippled.

"Well, there's the meanest thief I ever heard of," said Sergeant Crane as he hung up the telephone receiver last night. "What's that?" asked the six line sergeants, who were sitting near, awaiting their assignments. "Why, some one stole a cripple's locomotive apparatus," answered the desk sergeant. "S. L. Lewis, 22 Keystone avenue, had just reported that his son, who is obliged to use a tricycle in getting around, had left the vehicle standing in front of the courthouse yesterday afternoon, and after coming out could not find it. Some one had taken it away, and he was forced to find other means of getting home. The tricycle was a propeller, by hand power and had a small steering wheel in front."

AMUSEMENTS.

Park-Linden's Double Bill.

Patrons of the Park would do well to avail themselves of the last few remaining opportunities to witness a theatrical performance, for the season at that popular house closes Saturday night. Frank Linden and his clever company are still offering an entertaining. An acceptable change of bill was made yesterday afternoon when "My Son's Father," a comical curtain-raiser, was given in conjunction with "The Child of Fortune." Mr. Linden donned fairly well as a comedian, but in his more serious roles he is better than his part. His part of Sergeant Sealard in "The Child of Fortune" was a judicious mingling of the humorous and the serious, and he was well rewarded and received approbation. Miss Howard is doing some of her best acting in the role of Josephine, daughter of the regiment. She and W. J. Jossey rendered a couple of Tyrolean melodies in such manner as to elicit hearty applause. "The Child of Fortune" is elaborately staged, as are all of Linden's plays. The remaining performances should be seen, for the theater is kept delightfully comfortable by the aid of electric fans and two plays for the price of admission to one is certainly an extra inducement.

Notes of the Stage.

Godfrey's Military Band is a disappointment. It is an ordinary band, with several able soloists. It does not approach the merit that was expected.—Kansas City Star.

Clarissa Agnew wears the most striking bicycle costume in New York and rides a chainless wheel. It is said the club which she suddenly became popular when she falls past.

Truly shattuck, Kittle Mitchell and Florence Crosby, with a half dozen other stage posters, have started a new club in New York called the "Dandies." Truly Shattuck named it.

"The Choir Invisible" is to be dramatized and Henry Jewett will play the role of John Gray. Mr. Jewett has been playing John Brown in "The John Brown" ever since that piece left New York.

"The Club's Baby," which Jacob Litt has just produced at McVicker's Theater in Chicago, is described as another hit by this Western theatrical magazine. The performance do not begin until 8:30 each night.

"Who Killed Cog Robin?" of which J. Cheever Goodwin and Louis Harrison are the authors, has been secured by Thomas G. Seabrooke for production next season. The play is described as extremely farcical, embodying a French story with a very original theme; yet its authors claim for it a perfectly clean plot with no risqué lines or situations.

Mrs. Fiske has engaged Maurice Barrymore to play the part of Rawdon Crawley in "Becky Sharp," Langdon E. Mitchell's dramatization of "Fanny Hill." Mrs. Fiske will produce this play at the Fifth-avenue Theater next September. Mr. Barrymore will spend a part of the summer abroad, returning in August, when Mrs. Fiske will begin rehearsals of her new play.

Alfred Klein, the podgy comedian who recently left De Wolf Hopper after seven years, has read a new three-act farce called "My Lord, the Butler," by Joseph Adelmann, and is seriously thinking of accepting it for a starring tour next season. The title character is a dapper little lord, who is mistaken for a butler, and the play would be well suited to Klein's comic talents.

Mr. Klein will sail for Europe on Saturday, accompanied by his brother, Charles Klein.

Maxine Elliott, who gave her name and face to endorse a certain malt extract for women who imagine they are debilitated, received in her mail some time after her arrival in London with Nat Goodwin, the following letter:

"Dear Madam:—I enclose please find three dollars and fifty cents for six bottles of your compound, which please forward at once to your respect."

"MRS. ELMA ADAMSON, Moberly, Mo. 'P. S.—I write terrible.'"

BANNER SHOPPING YEAR

PEOPLE ARE SPENDING MONEY IN THE DOWN-TOWN STORES.

Some of the Novelties to Be Worn This Summer—The Millinery Line.

The local retail and wholesale dealers predict that this will be the banner year. The immense prosperity of the country in every way requires merchandise of all kinds, and, therefore, the factories are working overtime to supply the demand. The opinions of the various chains collectively express the all-absorbing item of interest—the improved condition of the country and the constantly increasing business. The cool weather during April and May has had a slightly depressing effect upon the wash goods, but a resumption of business is expected just as soon as the warm weather begins.

All sorts of tasteful trimming arrangements on muslin and other light weight summer materials are made by the use of black velvet, ribbon-edged lace. Another fancy in trimmings on silk and velveteen is the use of chiffon and Liberty bouillonné. These are not restricted to the bodice, as formerly, but are utilized as an outlining for the tunic as well as on every portion of the skirt. These same materials are also greatly used as wide plaited flounces, with a heading of gurgled Venice or Chantilly lace. Black or white net, covered with embroidery of sequins or beads, applique lace, are shown for fashionable gowns. White will undoubtedly be the feature of midsummer demand. Bolts of white stuff, manufactured in alternate stripings of embroidery insertion, fillings of lace and clusters of tucks, lie on the counter at a price any purse will be able to compass, and it requires no great amount of skill to put such a gown in wearing shape, since tucked and lace-edged and gathered frills are also used ready for application in the shops. Lace is universally worn. Jackets, coats, tunics, and even whole gowns, are made of lace. Never were such an endless variety of new dainty trimmings shown in the shops, little lace edgings and silk cordings are used to adorn and finish everything. Tucked stuffs are also shown in endless variety. Neckties have tucked ends and even hats have tucked bows.

Many clouds and little sunshine has made the season rather dull, but the stores on Washington street show some very handsome ones at remarkably low prices for the quality of the goods. One firm has just received a line of French parasols which exceed anything ever shown in Indianapolis in this line. They are fashioned in black and white combinations, and some are decorated with a wide band of gold. They are shown in a variety of styles, some with a wide band of gold, some with a wide band of silver, and some with a wide band of black. The midsummer millinery openings are now being held at the various houses and many among the extremely dressy ones, which are shown in leghorn, black lace and tulle. Among others is one called the "Senora Gonzalez," which is very stylish and popular. It is a Spanish urban of spangled jet and tulle in black and white, with a side trimming of a plume effect of a ruche of gauze caught in a knot in the back with a Gozalez ornament of brilliants. This hat is entirely new in Indianapolis. For comfort wear, with shirt waists, there is a variety of dressy walking hats shown. The Piccadilly model of fine Milan straw, with a wide band of gold, is shown in a variety of styles, some with a wide band of gold, some with a wide band of silver, and some with a wide band of black. Another, a yellow Tuscan Amazon hat, with a bow of brown velvet and a fancy quill, is shown in a variety of styles, some with a wide band of gold, some with a wide band of silver, and some with a wide band of black.
